TORREY CORRESPONDENCE

My dear Sir

You may ~~[illegible]~~ of mortification on finding a minute or two after leaving your house that I had forgotten my picture parcel of botanica &c. I must beg you to send it on to me here, and if I do not trespass too much on your kindness I will ask an additional favour. When I was taking my ticket at Bristol the clerk did not name the fare and I did not know it. I gave him a three dollar note. he returned me a one dollar note and it seems was getting the change out, but leaving waited a moment to see if more was coming and being rather hurried I went to the window before he was ready with it and it was after we had started that looking at my ticket I perceived that I ought to have had 75 cents additional change. I asked the ticket taker whether time was not [illegible] and he told me that the clerk had been looking for me with the change and could not find me - I do not choose to give him these 75 cents as he ought to have told me the price of the ticket - I therefore write on my card which I sent back - "the traveller who should have received 75 cents change at Lincoln which Dr Torrey will receive for me" - Any one I presume authorised by you can receive it and you can either put it into the pencil - or use it to prepay the parcel which will have the same effect. I write on this scrap of paper that you may endorse my draft to you which I should have taken with me - I shall retain a very pleasant remembrance of my visit to you and only regret that it has been necessary for me to make it so short

Believe me to be dear Sir very truly Yours

I am staying at the Walnut Hill House with William Hancock for the sake of being close at hand to attend my business in the morning and might if I should prefer it remove - forward any answer you may address me here
